FROM THE EDITOR

In compiling articles for this issue of the News I needed background on Quakers / Charles I and timepieces. I already had some books and other information but I wanted some details not available in the literature. So whilst waiting one Saturday morning for the milkman to call for his money I went on the world wide web (www.) put in a few key words (Quaker / King Charles) - got rid of the references to King Charles Spaniels - and by the time I was relieved of my weekly milk payment, less than half an hour later, I had printed off six pages on Quakers, been to the Royal web site, picked up information on Charles I and identified pages to look at later.

I don't pretend that the web is the answer to genealogists prayers - oh that it was - but it is another tool for us to use in the pursuit of our family history hobby. It is like ignoring the parish records or lesser known records because it is not straightforward. It should be used as another source. Once you have used it a few times you find that there are easy ways to get answers to your questions. If you get stuck you can always use the back button on the tool bar - it is invaluable!

Don't hamstring yourself in identifying that elusive piece of information. The web is being added to all the time - there were some 422,000 pages at the last count - so give it a go you may be pleasantly surprised.

There are also discussion /chat areas on the metcalfe surname, See http://www.rootsweb.com and http://genforum.genealogy.com/metcalf/ & metcalfe/.

Pet Sheep

When my husband and I were on holiday in New Zealand in 1999 we visited the Matakohe Museum which is situated between Dargaville & the Coromandel Peninsula. There in an exhibition of photographs we spotted a "Mrs Harold Metcalf with her pet sheep at Claremont, Metcalf's Point" the date possibly 1934. Mrs Metcalf looked quite elderly. I hope this may be of help to a family member and I'd be interested to hear from anyone into whose family she fits.

A Metcalfe Clockmaker

The first recorded Metcalfe clockmaker was Mark Metcalfe who was an apprentice to a well know clockmaker John Ogden of Wensleydale in the late 17th century. The first of what we would recognise as modern clocks were built in the 14th century. Prior to that, time was measured by a mixture of sun dials (a little difficult in northerly climes due to long winters and dull days even in summer!) water flow devices and notched candles or ropes. The Middle ages saw the introduction of mechanical clocks but many of these needed long, heavy weights which were only suitable for housing in large towers or halls - not really suitable for most dwelling houses. Also the clocks were not all that accurate (particularly in minutes) and many only recorded the passage of the hours.

The early seventeenth century saw advances on a number of fronts which enabled a pendulum to be used to regulate a clock. Around 1667 Robert Hooke an English physicist made a discovery which resulted in the use of a pendulum in a small space which meant that for the first time fairly accurate small clocks could be produced and kept in ordinary houses across the country. The first clockmakers often used local cabinet makers so many of the early clocks were of a simple design but usually of a solid construction. However as time went by many of these boxes became more and more ornate until highly intricate designs were to be found on the cabinets.

Mark Metcalfe born in the late 1680's was apprenticed to a Quaker of Bainbridge John Ogden. Once he had served his time, until the age of 21, he set up a business across the Ure in Askrigg - the first clockmaker in the village. He took on apprentices amongst them a James Wilson and a Christopher Caygill who then carried on the trade in the district taking on their own apprentices amongst them James and William Pratt who carried on the tradition in the area well into the 1830's.

As the 18th century progressed farmers and landowners began to be relatively well off and those that could acquired the new contraptions which often took pride of place in their houses. Many of the clocks have been handed down from generation to generation and whilst some have not lasted the passage of time there are a number of these clocks across the Dales. Mark Metcalfe made clocks for many years, dying in 1776 well into his eighties. Now, nearly 300 years after he started on his own in 1710, there are still a number of his clocks around and there is at least one example of his handiwork in Wensleydale. We were fortunate that David Arkwright M086 - who is interested in long case clocks came across the one pictured here and was allowed to take photographs. My thanks to him.

Again, the Metcalfe clan was at the forefront of new innovation with the introduction of the modern house clock. Shortly after the discoveries that allowed clocks to be more accurate and as consequence more in demand Metcalfes were involved in the process! If any of you have information on other Metcalfe clockmakers or know of other examples of Metcalfe clocks please let me know.

Policy Review: The Metcalfe Society - Fit for the Future

Meeting held on Saturday 6 November 1999 at The Benson Room, BMI, Birmingham Attendees: M3 George Buxton, M11 David Lambert (Chair), M29 Nina Benson, M46 David Metcalfe, M69 Peter Dobson, M409 Diane Howarth, M567 John Metcalfe

The aim of the Policy Review Committee was to be able to propose a strategy and detailed proposals to the main committee to enable the Metcalfe Society to be 'Fit for the Future'. Given the vast number of topics that need to be reviewed, the policy committee wholeheartedly agreed that the job was just too large for one small committee to tackle. Hence, the meeting focused on the strategic approach and scope of the policy review rather than penetrate down to the individual aspects. It was proposed that three separate sub-committees be established to review each area (the objectives and scope of each were defined) and then put forward proposals to the Policy sub-committee, who in turn would show how each could work together and report directly back to the main committee of the society for consideration by the membership.

The Policy Committee proposed that the structure of Metcalfe Society committees should be: Policy Review Committee and Sub-Committees for: Administration/Finance, Data/Projects, Marketing and Communication. The objectives for each of the sub committees included:-

- 1. Reviewing and Assessing the current methods
- 2. Formulating future methods of operation.

Topics would cover the whole range of Society activities with a view to formulating policy / strategy and procedures to meet the changing demands of the Metcalfe membership for the foreseeable future. As befitted such a major review members were invited to put forward their ideas to the Secretary for discussion by the appropriate sub-committee.

Secretary's Report

This first secretarial report of the new millennium comes from warmer climes after spending the school vacation wearing my feet out at the Disney theme parks of Florida. For those of you who have enjoyed/endured Disney World will have encountered Spaceship Earth at Epcot (looks like an enormous golf ball!) where you are reminded of the development of communications from caveman to the modern technologies of today such as video conferencing (the ability to have a live face to face discussion over the TV).

One of the main roles of secretary is to maintain communication both within the society and to outside organisations. After my year of initiation I was looking forward to being able to feel somewhat more in control, and being able to keep on top of the mountain of letters, queries, e-mails etc. But when one's main tool of communication (namely my personal computer) decides to take a holiday without notice, it is amazing how even the easiest of jobs just becomes a hassle. Similarly, for all of you who drive, there is always those few days when the car is not available for some reason - you then realise how you depend on this mechanical item just to go about your business everyday. It feels as if your right arm has been cut off, and life is just hassle, hassle hassle. February was like that and by the time you read this life and my PC should be back on track!

Good and improving communication is fundamental for the society to flourish. As you have seen with the launch of the society internet web site over a year ago, this new line of communication has found many new members. Our four overseas agents are able to communicate via e-mail both with local members and directly to some of our committee - thereby again improving service within the society. You will see in this journal the announcement of the latest facility available to you - the members only area of the society website. For those of you who are not on the internet, please be assured that you will still receive the same information - we are merely making society information more easily available to our membership through various methods of communication. Also look out for news on our flagship event - the Mecca Muster. I look forward to continuing to focus on maintaining and improving the communication to current members, potential new members and other organisations......now where did I put my pen?

It's a small world Elizabeth Morey, M255

April 2000

On a trip to England from my home in New Zealand in 1995, one of the things I was determined to achieve was to find the house where my mother was born in Coundon, in the south western area of Co Durham. There had been a village at Coundon for centuries but with the expansion of the coal industry in the area, the village had also been extended to provide housing for the many miners who worked at Leasingthorne Mine, just to the north of Coundon.

My mother, Jean Wilson, the daughter of Leonard Wilson and Elizabeth (nee Metcalfe) was born at 29 Howlish Terrace in Coundon in 1921. My first visit to Coundon took place in the company of Vi Simpson (nee Metcalfe) (MN119) from Huntly, New Zealand, on a Tuesday afternoon in late October. I was armed with an old postcard of Howlish Terrace with an arrow pointing rather indistinctly to one of the terrace houses - the houses were typical terrace houses, but they did have quite distinctive chimneys. My mother's sister had given me the postcard many years ago and said that the arrow pointed to the house where the Wilson family had lived before emigrating to New Zealand. However, when I drove into Coundon all I could find was Howlish View and the houses in Howlish View didn't match those in the postcard and the chimneys definitely were not right.

I walked around the street and asked several people of all ages, in the street and in the local shop, if they could tell me where Howlish Terrace was. Nobody had heard of Howlish Terrace. I gave up and went to St James' Church, where my grandparents were married and where my mother and her siblings had been baptised. The church was locked so, once again, I gave up - and feeling rather disappointed, I left Coundon.

A couple of days later, Vi and I decided to give Howlish Terrace and the church another try. Once more, I walked all around and could not find the correct street. However, at least this time I did manage to get into the church, as the cleaning ladies were in residence. They very obligingly removed buckets, mops and vacuum cleaners so that I could get good photos from all angles - but they did not know where Howlish Terrace was.

A few days later, on my last day in the area, we made a slight detour so that I could try one last time to find 29 Howlish Terrace. As I parked the car and looked up at the houses, I immediately realised that I had found the right street. It was the street I had been up and down many times, but for some reason that day I was looking from a different perspective, I was standing in almost the exact spot from which the old photo had been taken, and the houses and chimneys lept out at me! However, the street was called Collingwood Street - something strange here, I thought - and how was I to identify what had previously been No 29?

As I walked near the local shop a charming lady came to the door of the shop and asked if I was the person who had been looking for Howlish Terrace - my fame had spread, and I think by this time half the population of Coundon had heard about me! The lady, Lucy Thompson, was the perfect person to have met. She explained that the whole long street had been renamed and renumbered years ago, but she could remember the numbers of the old houses. No 29 was right next door to the local shop. The relief, the emotion, and the excitement at having found No 29 at long last!

Lucy invited Vi and I into her home (over the road from the house where my mother had been born) and made us so welcome. We met her husband, her daughter and several neighbours. Before bidding Lucy farewell, I had the presence of mind to take her address in case I needed help with Coundon local history in the future - which I did a year or so after arriving back home. Over a period of time, Lucy patiently and diligently answered all my questions on Coundon. She had several old photos of Coundon in her home, which she had copied for me. She asked all her family and neighbours and ferreted out more old photos. Just wonderful.

However, the story doesn't quite finish there. Lucy knew that I was looking for the Wilson and Metcalfe families and had been putting her thinking cap on and asking around for information about the families. In the back of Lucy's own mind was a vital piece of information which was just waiting for the right time for the penny to drop and the penny dropped one day in early 1998, a couple of months before I was due to visit England and Co Durham again. She suddenly remembered that her husband, John (who had died shortly after my visit to Coundon in 1995) had an aunt - his mother's sister - who had married a Jack Metcalfe. When I received Lucy's letter I screeched with joy as my grandmother, Elizabeth Metcalfe, had only one brother and his name was John William Metcalfe. My mother and aunt could not remember anything very substantial about the family they had left behind in England when they came to New Zealand as young children, and with whom the family had long since lost contact, except that they had an uncle known as Jack. Lucy had come up trumps again! Needless to say, I have proven beyond a shadow of a doubt that Lucy's husband's mother's sister's husband is my mother's mother's brother. Phew! Lucy sent me photos of my great-uncle Jack and his family - my mother had just acquired five more cousins. I corresponded with my mother's eldest cousin, Peggy Wood (nee Metcalfe) who now lives in Newton Aycliffe and last year my sister and I had the pleasure of meeting Peggy and her sister, Mildred Wheeler, at Lucy's home in Coundon.

There is a moral to this story: If the first person you ask can't help you, ask the next person. If that person can't help, ask the next. Don't give up, eventually you too may strike it lucky and realise that it really is a very small world.

Chairman's Report

When this is read we will already be one quarter of the way through the year, having safely survived the threatened "bugs", both Millennium and flu I trust.

In my last report I stated that we were the finest One-name Society. It is gratifying to report that this is not just a subjective view. Two recent examples underline this.

At a meeting of the local Family History Society to which I belong, we had a "question and answer" session recently. The question was posed had anyone had any research success by joining or asking for help from One-name Societies . One member of the audience said that they were a waste of time, he had had no reply to his query and another said that this was his experience too. I hastily declared my interest, on behalf of our Society, and was assured that the two dissatisfied members of the audience were not referring to the Metcalfe Society (not that that was a surprise!!).

One of the critics paid us a compliment by saying that the Metcalfe Society was "huge" and that we were run "like an efficient commercial company". The other said that he knew that our Mecca News was regularly praised by the judges of the Elizabeth Simpson Award. Several others then said that they had heard of us and believed that we were one of the foremost One-name Societies; we set an example for others to emulate.

At the Federation of Family History Societies Meeting on the "Future of the Federation" Diane, our secretary, played a leading role in the debates during the day. Our standing, which was already high in the Family History "world" was much enhanced by Diane's contributions. She advanced the perception of other Societies of One-name Societies and their importance to the Family History movement generally. I would like to thank her for her attendance.

Every organisation should heed what the outside world thinks of it. If it is criticism then it needs to address the concern; if it is praise then it should be pleased that it is doing something right. It must not, however, become complaisant. I am glad that our Society is not guilty of the latter. As was reported in the last issue of Mecca News, the Committee asked several of us to look constructively and critically at the running of the Society and how we can improve the service that we offer. Following the initial meeting referred to in Mecca News in December, several groups have been entrusted with particular tasks. They will have met by the time this is published and each group will be reporting their preliminary findings to the March Committee Meeting.

A minor change, already approved by the Committee, will be the new venue for the next Mecca Muster. Ripon has served us well for ten years and we are grateful to the College for their help over that time. The new York site for the Muster will I am sure be popular with you and I would encourage you to "book early".

The Committee aims to ensure that the Society will continue to flourish and to remain pre-eminent. By carrying out the review that we have embarked upon, we will I am sure improve what is already recognised as a good service by members and the outside world too.

The work I do has been drastically reduced from that which I did up to the AGM 1998 with many new members joining in to help. So it is purely the ARCHIVIST job that is up for grabs.

On the World Wide Web

Our site continues to be well-visited with over 4500 surfing in since inception (October '98 - February '00). The newest addition is the "Members Only" area to which so far 22 members have access authorization. There is currently little content of any real benefit to members but the society is collecting suggestions which can be sent to me or Diane Howarth. Diane will be putting forward these ideas at a board meeting and some decision will be made as to what can be put in this area that will meet member wishes, society mandates, and satisfy legal obligations. Please continue to provide input.

On various genealogical discussion groups on the internet, there has been much written about the UK's Data Protection Act and what it means to genealogists. I have included in the Member area a copy of the Societies registration and an extract from a government pamphlet on the genealogical aspect of the act. I expect that if we restrict publication of data to pre-1895 we should not be breaking any laws.

Mary Morris, our New Zealand agent is now on email. She can be found on the "How to Join" page. Nina Benson's email address appears on our web site but only in the Members-only area to make sure this valuable and dedicated researcher is reserved for Society members only.

A few new links have been added to the links page. One is to a site about the medieval village of Wharram Percy. It gives some interesting insights into the workings of the medieval manors found during this archaeological study of this East Riding, Yorkshire village. Another link is to an incredible site that is a "One-Place Study" - Wirksworth, Derbyshire. Although I could find few Metcalfes (var.) amongst the thousands of records, I found the concept to be unique and the presentation astounding. There is a link to the "Wilma - Dorn - Flood - Fisk Family History" page which includes many Metcalfes from the American Revolution on - supposed descendants of a Theophilus c1650 of England. Another link will take you to the Roots Web Guide to Tracing Family Trees. It is mostly American but has information for researching in countries other than the US as well, so those who need some guidance on getting started should visit. I hope you will send me your favourite genealogical or Metcalfe links for inclusion on this page.

The Society of Friends

The Beginnings

The drums gave out a mournful beat, colours flying the procession made its way to Whitehall. On the scaffold the block and axe lay ready. The prisoner not wishing to shiver in the cold of that late January afternoon, and give the impression of fear, had on an extra shirt. He mounted the steps and restated his unalienable right to rule. His final words were "I go from a corruptible to an incorruptible Crown, where no disturbance can be". The axe swung. King Charles the first was dead the Divine Right of Kings to rule the English people was severed on that day in 1649. England would not be the same again.\(^1\)

A similar change occurred some 600 years earlier with the death of another king. The bastard Count usurped the throne of dubious claim of Harold Battle in 1066. That was a lish history; within twenty the Harrying of the North

"the Norman heirachy had all but extinguished the Anglo Saxon ruling class" William of Normandy England from the somewhat Godwinson on the field of momentous change in Engyears after the Rising and the Norman heirachy had all but extinguished the Anglo Saxon ruling class. State and Church were effectively run by foreigners and so it stayed for almost 250 years.<sup>2</sup>

The Black Death of the mid fourteenth century weakened the structures and the English began to express their feelings. They almost succeeded in 1381 during the Peasants Revolt in removing the king but more cunning and desperate men took advantage of the naivety of the rebels to re-establish their grip - but not as strong as before. The weakening continued into the fifteenth century. Whilst there was little that could be done to remove the Norman descended aristocracy the Church was another matter. The ordinary people were denied access to the Holy Bible - few if any knew Latin and the placing of priests, bishops and other hierarchical bodies which in the main knew little or nothing of the local needs resulted in the growth of practices previously unknown. These included excommunication, the payment of tolls to the local incumbent rather than good purposes, penances and the adoration of the saints. The early years of the 1400's saw the growth of a puritan sect, the Lollards, which after initial violence showed itself as an obstinacy against what they considered to be stories taken as reality and the seduction by symbols. Whilst efforts were made during the rest of the century to remove what was considered a heresy Lollardy "was active in the north during the early sixteenth century when it had a continuous history through to the Reformation".3

The Church was under attack throughout Europe as the 1500's progressed. Martin Luther in 1517 attacked the Church's position on indulgences which resulted in Henry VIII responding with his Assertio Septem Sacramentorium in 1521, rebutting Luther's assertions. Protestantism continued to be attacked by the English ruling class but by 1527 Henry's position had changed but not purely for religious reasons. His relationship with his first wife Catherine had deteriorated for the king wanted a new wife - Anne Boleyn. The Church under the auspices of the Pope had difficulty in agreeing to the divorce due to tangled politics on the Continent. Henry sent various missions which failed, after which he resorted to bullying the Church in England. Throughout 1528 attempts were made, which appeared to succeed, then failed for one reason and another to secure the divorce. The Pope eventually in 1529 summoned Henry to Rome like other supplicants - a situation the king was not one to accept. He saw it as a test of his authority and he was not one to accept a foreign bishop ruling in England. The Church of Rome in England was removed to be replaced by the new Church of England. Those seeking reform had a Church more to their liking but throughout the remainder of the century and into the early years of the 1600's the struggle between the new Protestantism and the old Catholicism continued 4

In 1625 Charles I came to the throne. His incessant financial problems plus the marriage to a devoutly Catholic French princess incensed the Puritans in the population. The king dissolved Parliament in 1629 and ruled on his own for eleven years; a new prayer book was forced on Scotland which resulted in rebellion. Parliament fell out even more with the King over his heavy handed actions, which were instigated by his wife and eventually the problems led to civil war in 1642. The north and west were predominantly for the king but the more prosperous and populous south and east were able to sustain a long and ultimately successful campaign. By 1648 Charles was in the hands of his opponents and done to death in early 1649.<sup>5</sup>

Against this background of political change the religious order was still in turmoil. The old religion of Catholicism still endured especially in the northern counties of Yorkshire and Lancashire, however the freedom brought by Protestantism had set some on a path of spiritual enlightenment. There were others in the north who wished to follow this path and a movement called the Seekers was active in the Yorkshire dales; into this area was drawn a young man who was to challenge the existing Puritanism taking it to what he considered was its logical conclusions. The young man concerned was George Fox. His followers considered themselves "Friends of Jesus" (later this simply became Friends). Their more common name of Quakers was to come later.

George Fox was born in 1624 and at the age of nineteen in the middle of the English Civil War he left home on a four year search for answers to questions that had troubled him since his youth. He travelled widely consulting with religious leaders and denominations but not finding his answer. In 1647 he felt the call to become a travelling preacher to promote a concept of Inward Light - the concept coming from John 1:9. He believed that:

- i) every man and woman had direct access to God so that churches were not needed
- ii) that everyone was of equal worth
- iii) there was no need for elaborate ceremonies; and
- iv) following the Inward Light would lead to spiritual development and perfection. These ideas were to bring the movement into conflict with the established denominations as time progressed.<sup>6</sup>

Many dales people responded to Fox's message when he visited the north of England in 1652. Standing on the summit of Pendle Hill he saw a vision of "the great people in white rainment". The Seekers, the large body of nonconformists disillusioned with established religious practices flocked to his call and the movement rapidly spread. Amongst the first meeting houses was Brigflatts near Sedburgh - south east of Kendal - which still remains today.

As a result of the movement's views they were frequently prosecuted. Fox himself being imprisoned many times. In London in 1664 it was recorded that hundreds of Friends were arrested. In the latter part of the 1600's over 3000 Quakers spent time in jail. The names of many of those imprisoned were recorded in a variety of documents and it is from these, plus the records of the Friends and other sources that details of our ancestors in the late 17th and 18th centuries can be found. In the next issue sources will be indicated and a potential rich area of research revealed.

A Yank in Hawes or Who Was Henry.

In September 1912 a letter was written by Henry Metcalfe of 147 Fourth Avenue, NYC, the bulk of which is shown below. The Annie referred to is probably the daughter of Christopher Metcalfe (c1823-1896) & Jane nee Mte. Any descendants who send a SAE can have a photocopy of the full 6 page letter.

CS Metcalfe M305

"..... I repeat that I too have been at Richmond with my genealogist Mr Harry Speight of (I can't remember where just now- but he is quite a writer Romantic Richmondshire etc and he lives at Priestgarth in a village near Leeds - any good bookseller can place him. While at Richmond, I did what I could in looking up Theophilus - and Matthew Taylor. But it was hopeless, XX had called Matthew - the Illuminated Divine - I found that the I. D. was Johannes Taulerus a Bohemian Monk of the XV century. Like the Simon strands and even Nicholas who were all R. C. Clerics, the search for descendants was not profitable. Now as to Lord M's ancestry I saw Gilbert M. in London. He is a barrister of the Temple, and his father wrote the Metcalfe Records, of which you may know (copy from the Society's librarian £6 + p/p) Gilbert cast some pretty severe doubts on the ancestry of Lord M's father. I inferred that he might have been the illegitimate son of some distinguished person who pushed him along in his career. This tendency might, by heredity associate him with the Simons and Francis of former days, as it did with one of his own unlawful sons who was a Colonel in the EI Co. All these matters seem very far from being worth while to me - as I do not really know who was our early immigrant. My grandfather - who was a remarkably fine man - and whose name is even now respected in Mississippi, said that he was so fond of mutton himself, that he thought the original John must have been transported for sheep-stealing!

I spent a great deal of time and much more money than I could afford - about £140 I believe - in looking up the family history, as my reward I have acquired a thorough distrust of genealogists for pay, and a great love for a milk maid I met just about six years ago today near Hawes, Annie Metcalfe who tends part of a small holding which she shares with a cousin and her cousins husband. This is called 'Borwins' near Askrigg. I saw her for about ten minutes in the company of her brother George and his co-tenants. Since, I have corresponded with her frequently. She has in her heart the love of God and of poetry in quite equal shares and is one of the loveliest characters I know. If you should go to Hawes - see her. I have been advised to send her to London - but what becomes of a woodland violet in the Strand. She has no worldly ambition and no tinge of discontent - and - she is by no means pretty. I like to feel that we are distant cousins; though I was rebuked when I suggested that the Rector of Hawes, who took pay from me at say 1/6 an hour for searching the register, should help her - for pay - in her higher education. Too great a difference in social position I was told.

If I can help you, command me Henry Metcalfe.

PS. I have a great friend who lives near you. Mr James P Jackman of 'Burley', Woolton Hill, near Newbury. I remember driving through Handover as he called it on account of the rapacity of those who collected the fines for excessive speed

I have also the original Metcalfe arms temp Agincourt from Aysgarth Ch. left me by John Henry Metcalfe & sent me by Col Simon Conyers Scrope of Danby Middleham his executor & very good friend.

Announcing the 'Members Only' area

Are you connected to the Internet? If you are, it is hoped that you have already surfed our society Web site at http://www.metcalfe.org.uk. The society is pleased to announce a new facility to all our members who are 'Internet-connected'. To date non-members can access exactly the same information our members. But now we are able to offer a 'members only' area on our web-site. The idea and the facility has been setup totally by our webmaster - Susan Metcalfe Harper M266. Without Susan we would have no website whatsoever. As the title implies - we are aiming to offer an additional benefit available only through society membership.

Over 40 members have already discovered the members only area and have requested access. The procedure for gaining access is for members to e-mail their request to our secretary Diane Howarth, who provides Susan Harper with confirmation that membership is current. Susan will then provide the member with a user-id and password. If a member does not renew their membership their access codes can easily be removed and they will not be able to continue to access the area. In this way it is secure and protected for members only.

This new facility is in its infancy so there is currently limited reward in the area:

- * Archivist Nina Benson's e-mail address for research queries, which is not available anywhere else on the site.
- * A request for input from members on what they would like to see on the site.
- * The Metcalfe Society Data Protection Registry entry.
- * Excerpts from the last Mecca News.
- * Member input has been solicited in the form of a "bulletin board".

Members are encouraged to send MIs, census, etc. tidbits that they have come across that may not be of any use to them but useful to others.

By the time you read this your committee will have reviewed and agreed an initial policy of what (and what not) to include in this area. So do expect to see more being posted in due course. But it is your area. If you have any thoughts on what you would like to be able to access in this restricted area, please send an e-mail to Susan Harper or Diane Howarth. Their e-mails are on the web-site.

For those members who are not 'Internet-connected' please be assured that all information available via our website will also be made available to you via good old pen and paper. As we see every day on the TV, the Internet is all about being able to access so much information so easily. Hence our web site and use of e-mail is another form of communication which is faster, cheaper and easily accessible for many.

The All New Mecca Muster not to be missed!

Whether you are a relatively new or long-standing member of the Metcalfe Society, you cannot afford to miss the Mecca Muster this year. As previously announced in the last issue, our flagship event has moved to Askham Bryan College on the southern outskirts of York, to be held on Saturday 21st October.

For those of you who have been to a previous Muster held at Ripon, the regular services and facilities will be available - access to all our society records (be they on paper or held on computers), sales and library sections. We are reducing the time required for the business section - the AGM by providing written reports with the August Mecca News. You will also have much more time to get to meet and greet other members, some of which may be connected to you.

But in addition to these regulars, check out the announcement and reservation sheet included with this journal for the all-new features. So why not include this super day dedicated to your Metcalfe interest with a short or long weekend trip to discover the beautiful city of York? You really cannot afford to miss this opportunity. Make your reservation now!

Conference Secretary

George Buxton M003 our Conference Secretary for the last few years is to focus his efforts on a variety of research projects for the Society. His position will be taken by Mrs Lesley Longworth M068. Our thanks to George for his work in organising the Muster in the past.

WHERE THEY EAT FOLK

The extended Metcalfe family who came to dominate the farms of Malham Moor in the 19th century were descended from the Metcalfes of Cosh at the very head of Littondale (a tributary of Upper Wharfedale). Cosh is known as the most remote dwelling in the Yorkshire Dales and one of the loneliest houses in England. It appears as "Grenfeldcoche" or Green Field Cosh in monastic records of 1457. (Cosh is a Middle English word for hut,cottage or hovel.) Scandinavian shepherd huts high in the mountains are still called Kosh today. At 1450 feet above sea level it is reached by walking up to the head of Littondale then taking a wet path another mile and a half up the hillside.

From its origins as an old Norse shepherd's bothy it was probably continuously inhabitated until abandoned by the final inhabitants - the Browns in 1953. The property was then later owned by the Morphet family of High Birkwith with the farmhouse being used as a Dales centre by a Yorkshire College. There were once three houses and a self-sufficient community - it had to be - as often snow might lie at Cosh for weeks at a time in the winter. The hard winter of 1947 saw the snow lie for two months and gave rise to jokers in the "milder" climate of Littondale putting out stories that Cosh was "where they eat folk" and where they had "salted the old man down" to survive. This latter was probably not as horrific as it sounds as in Cosh they would usually kill the pig for the winter and salt it to preserve it. On the other hand... it was a hard winter.

The earliest reference to Metcalfes in Littondale is found in the Fountains Abbey Lease book. Ralph Metcalff of Cosh held a tenement in 1496 paying a rental of 20 shillings (£1). Matthew Metcalfe of Cosh paid 30 shillings (£1.50) twice a year to Marmaduke, Abbot of Fountains for fifteen years from 1505. Metcalfes were still living in the remote house as Christopher Metcalfe of Cosh made a will in 1607 as did John in 1615. Parish registers in the late 1600's and early 1700's recorded that the families of Thomas (Senior and Junior), Richard, Alexander and James Metcalfe all lived there. George Metcalfe the son of Thomas (probably the Senior) of Cosh was baptised at Arncliffe in 1697. The son of Thomas and his third wife he lost his three sisters, his younger brother and his father by the time he was six being the only child left to his mother. George later lived at Foxup two miles further down the dale. It was from George's youngest child - Christopher born around 1751 that many of the descendants of the Metcalfes of Malham Moor, can trace their line. See Branch 10, page 160 of Metcalfe - History of the Clan.

Extracts from The Metcalfes of Malham Moor supplied by Dr Peter Metcalfe M031 and additional material from Bill Mitchell's Yorkshire, At t' Back o' Beyond (pages63-66) published by the Dalesman.

The authoritative works are now available!

As most members will know, and as described in the December 97 issue (No 53) of the Mecca News (page 6), the content of the 'history' section of the hugely successful book "Metcalfe - History of the Clan", was a fusion of the only two authoritative works on the history of the Metcalfes that we know are in existence. Due to the expiry of copyright, and with permission to copy, the society hasnow been able to make available the printed text from these two original books: 'Metcalfe Records' by Walter & Gilbert Metcalfe, Fellows of the Society of Antiquaries of London. This book was published privately in 1891, limited to 50 copies and is therefore rare in the extreme. It is a scholarly work limited to the Nappa branch, the earliest to have a recorded history. Reliable with references galore, but is really intended for the scholar, with large extremely boring extracts from old legal documents and the need to know some Latin!

'Medecalf' by the Rev Thomas Metcalfe, published 1930 by William Clowes and Sons Ltd. Very scarce and difficult to find. A pioneer work, first to attempt to unravel the very early history of the family pre-Nappa Hall and deal with the topic as a whole. Debunks the notion that we all derive from Nappa but in the nature of things deals with an era where a great deal of research still needs to be done and much is open to question. Even if it can be obtained it lacks the maps/diagrams needed to make sense easily of the highly involved series of events it relates.

The society now holds the text of both books on the computer (courtesy of our President, Charles S. Metcalfe M305). They have been printed out and bound. 'Metcalfe Records' is A4 in size, and available at £6 plus postage.' Medecalf' is A5 in size, and available at £5 plus postage. (Details of postage costs can be found on the sales order form.) These copies are now available from the society. Please send UK sterling cheques to Carol Arkwright at the Sales department, or local currency cheques to your local agent in New Zealand, Australia, Canada or USA. All books will be despatched from the UK.

WHAT'S IN A WORD?

Computing 28 October 1999. Tim Medcalf of Link Group Consultants wrote to the computer weeky paper about problems in explaining what he did. He's an analyst programmer and he was explaining to his girl friend that computers don't understand English and to get them to do what you want you have to learn their language as with French or German. She asked him what the computer word was for "the". He said he didn't know. Her response was "You obviously aren't very good then are you?".

Wills 2000 Project (so far - February 6, 2000)

Since taking on the job for this project I have been joined by five other members to form the 'team'. The other members are Rosemary Brown, Denny Minnitt, Robert Metcalfe & Eileen Metcalfe who I am extremely grateful to, for their unfailing help.

So far to date we have processed 61 wills completely. This involves obtaining the wills, extracting the content which can be extremely difficult, requiring painstaking work with a magnifying glass and considerable background knowledge and word processing the extracted data.

We have quite a few wills, which are at the stage of being keyed to disc. Approximately 67 wills/admons exist in the lists system which is the Metcalfe Society data store and some of these have been processed, many have already have been extracted. Approximately 44 wills have yet to be looked at. In total we have 172 wills and admons.

Quite a number of wills have been received from members and we are grateful for this. A number were received at the Muster and any not returned so far will be returned in due course. Thank you for your patience.

The copyright problem has been resolved with the Archives with the help of David Lambert our legal expert. Our benefactor who wishes to remain anonymous has been kind in funding the acquisition of new material from the Archives.

Gone but not forgotten

After visiting the Family Records Centre in Islington I was dawdling through Exmouth Market to the bus stop when there at No 40 was a shop front with the old lettering: Medcalf - Cash Butchers. The Medcalf name had been adopted by the present owners Medcalf Applied & Contemporary Arts.

and finally.....

In the Saga magazine of January 2000 a little article entitled "The Wonder Dog of Wensleydale". This dog, owned by the warden of the YHA in Aysgarth, would after dinner, bring in her master's pipe in her mouth and his cap on her head; she then proceeded to play dominoes indicating the tile with her paw. Another game was taking away sticks one or two at a time from a pile of fifteen, the loser being the one with the last stick. The dog's owner always lost. She could bark out her age and also speak uttering what sounded like "I am" when asked if she was hungry!

How to get to York & Askham Bryan College

However you choose to travel, by road, rail, sea or air, York is easy to reach.

By car - York is approximately half-way between London and Edinburgh, only a few miles off the main A1 and close to the M1 and M62 motorways. The average driving time from London or Edinburgh is approx 3.5 hours. Road travel information tel 0645-556575. From the A1 take the A59 to get to the centre of York. To get to the college from the A1 (north or south) take the A64 towards York. Take the A1237 exit for Acomb/Askham Bryan. At the roundabout take the first exit (Acomb/Askham Bryan) and after a few hundred yards the college entrance is clearly marked on your left. Proceed along the drive and use the car park which is alongside the drive on your left. The Conference Hall is on the right hand side of the drive almost opposite the car park. Look out for the Muster signs to direct you.

By train - there are frequent fast services between York and London (King's Cross), Peterborough, Newcastle, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Birmingham, Bristol and the West Country, Liverpool, Manchester and Leeds. Rail enquiries tel 0345-484950

By coach - National Express operates coach services to York from most parts of Britain either direct or by connection. Tel 0990-808080.

By air - the nearest airport at Leeds/Bradford is just 28 miles away. Newcastle is within easy reach and there are regular direct train services from Manchester to York taking less than 2 hours. Tel Leeds/Bradford 0113-250-9696, Manchester 01652-688456, Newcastle 0191-286-0966

From York centre there is an excellent Saturday bus service provided by Coastliner to Copmanthorpe as follows:

Departs Stonebow 08.40, Rougier St 08.45, Rail Station 08.45 arriving 9am Copmanthorpe

Departs Stonebow 09.15, Rougier St 09.20, Rail Station 09.25 arriving 9.35am Copmanthorpe

Departs Copmanthorpe 4.35pm, 5.05pm, 5.35pm to the above destinations. It is a few minutes walk from Copmanthorpe to the College.

Otherwise take a taxi which will take about 10 minutes from the centre.

Where to stay? What to see and do during your visit to York?

The answers to both of these questions for everyone visiting York can be found in the booklet:

'England's Best Historic City - Guide to York'

Please call York Tourist Board on 01904-554488 or 01904-621756 (for international callers, replace the first 0 with 44, the UK country code) who will gladly send you a copy in the post free of charge. It is an excellent publication which reccommends facilities ranging from 4 star hotels to self-catering, camping and caravan sites - something for everyone. For each facility, the guide outlines, prices, location and contact details. All the accommodation reccommended by the York tourist bureau is featured on the internet at:

www.york-tourism.co.uk

You can browse through the properties, most with full colour pictures. Search for your requirements, eg price, non-smoking, ensuite facilities, parking etc. The website will also give you directions to your chosen accommodation

As Askham Bryan College is situated approximately 4 miles to the south-west of the city centre, it is suggested that accommodation be reserved either in the city centre or towards the south of the city, rather than the north. There is also a Travel Lodge on the A64 approximately a mile from the college (tel 01937-835067) and a bed and breakfast in the nearby village (tel 01904-707521).

Askham Bryan college can also provide basic student accommodation on-site at the college. The cost and number of rooms available will not be known until early September. If you are interested in receiving details of the college accommodation at that time, please indicate on the booking form.

The booklet also provides a map and details of what to see and do in York. For each attraction the guide provides opening times, prices and contacts for further information. There is so much to see and do in York - National Railway Museum, Ghost tours, Jorvik Viking Centre, York Brewery, York Minster. Also, check out the York Tourism website above where you will be able to check out York's many attractions and facilities.
